

How heavy is a 195 fiber optic cable clamp

AI Overview

A 195 fiber optic cable clamp typically weighs between 0.2 and 0.5 pounds (90-225 grams), depending on its material and design.

Fiber optic cable clamps, such as the FasClamp or S-type clamps, are generally made from durable plastic or corrosion-resistant metal to secure fiber cables without damaging them. The weight varies based on whether the clamp is designed for single drop cables, flat drop bundles, or larger loose tube cables. Smaller clamps for indoor or light-duty applications are lighter, while clamps designed for outdoor or tension-bearing ADSS cables are heavier due to reinforced construction. For practical purposes:

- Plastic or insulated clamps: ~0.2-0.3 pounds (90-135 grams)
- Metal or reinforced clamps: ~0.4-0.5 pounds (180-225 grams) These clamps are designed to be lightweight for easy installation while providing sufficient grip to prevent cable movement during splicing or tensioning. If exact weight is critical for shipping or load calculations, it is recommended to consult the manufacturer's datasheet for the specific 195 model.
